

Professional development: online book study

“Your Choice” book study

- How can we positively change the future for students within our schools and classrooms?
- What are you reading that inspires you to be the best student influencer in today’s challenging world?
- What are you reading that will help you empower and educate students?

Share this book with your colleagues in our class starting March 8. Today’s educational literature is teeming with titles for this unique collaborative learning opportunity.

In this “Your Choice” class, we will read, reason and research teacher and student potential in the areas YOU want to study AND share the knowledge with like-minded and eager colleagues.

Come away with new hope and a toolbox full of ideas for building a better student! This professional development class is responding to the needs of teachers and administrators to support the movement to teach in ways that will strengthen student confidence, voice and achievement.

Participants will begin by reviewing the evolutionary history of instructional processes that give students the freedom to think and the opportunity for choice. Participants will consider some of the teaching practices that encourage learners to become empowered to reach their potential in today’s modern world. This collection of specialized literature will be shared and presented throughout the class to help build a better student.

Course period: March 8-May 17 (rolling start, two-week window)

Credits:

- Earn one or two Ashland graduate credit hours
 - 1 hour (6150 Y6), $250
 - 2 hour (6150 Z6), $500

Facilitators: Sherry Kneece and Lisa Heins.

To register, go to <https://tinyurl.com/y3vmjblp>.

For more information
send an e-mail to sherry.kneece@cvcasd.com or call Lisa Heins at (740) 474-7529, Ext. 1413.
Book selections must be approved by one of the facilitators.